On Tax Cut

County Is Debating Survey's Estimate

A report that Pettis County residents could possibly receive a seven cent tax rate cut for 1971 and still allow their county government to operate on a cash basis has prompted doubtful and negative replies from both Jim Green, presiding judge of the Pettis County Court, and Mrs. Mary Jane Wilson, county clerk.

The report, issued Thursday by the Missouri Public Expenditure Survey, states that Pettis County is one of 24 Missouri counties which has sufficient funds left over from previous years' taxation to allow taxpayers to receive tax rate cutbacks this year.

According to the survey, taxpayers in the 24 counties will pay $1.4 million in unnecessarily levied county property taxes this year, unless these counties lower in the next few weeks the tentative tax rates placed in their budgets last January and February.

The governmental research organization said that the amount by which the tentative rates can be lowered ranges from three cents to 46 cents per $100 valuation, and averages 12 cents.

Counties in this area reportedly eligible for tax rate reductions are Pettis, seven cents per $100 valuation; Johnson and Saline, both with 11 cents; Lafayette, 29 cents; and Benton, 46 cents.

The counties are in a position to lower their tentative tax rates because "each is maintaining a larger cash balance in its general fund than needed to operate on a cash basis."

According to the survey, Pettis County had unobligated surplus funds amounting to $357,541 as of Jan. 1, 1971, which could be carried over from 1970 and 1971 for the county to operate on during the first part of the year.

Local Presbyterians Question Davis Fund

The governing body of Broadway Presbyterian Church Wednesday evening questioned the "propriety" of the $10,000 grant to the Angela Davis Defense Fund given by the denomination's national Council on Church and Race.

The money for the black militant, who has been charged in a California murder conspiracy case, was approved by the council in May. Miss Davis, a former philosophy instructor at the University of California in Los Angeles, faces trial in connection with a shooting in which a judge and three others were killed.

The Sedalia church's action is one of numerous instances of disapproval of the grant across the country.

The national headquarters of the United Presbyterian Church in Philadelphia has received thousands of letters protesting the

Mrs. Wilson agreed that $357,541 was the amount of the prior years' revenue which is available for this year's expenditures, but said that the figure is not truly a "surplus" in the county.

She said that the money is part of $789,299.92 estimated by the county as total revenue from all sources for 1971. From this figure, the total approved expenditures for 1971, amounting to $589,909.29, must be subtracted, she said. When this is done, an unappropriated balance of $199,390.63 shows up for 1971, according to Mrs. Wilson. She pointed out that this "surplus" is only a little over half of the amount suggested by the survey.

Both Green and Mrs. Wilson stated that the county is required by law to maintain five per cent of its total tax revenue in abeyance as an emergency fund. The emergency fund for this year amounts to $39,598.61, according to Mrs. Wilson.

Neither Mrs. Wilson nor Green could definitely state whether this five per cent figure had been taken into consideration as part of the approved expenditures for 1971. According to Mrs. Wilson, it is entirely possible that the $39,598.61 should be subtracted from the unappropriated balance for 1971, leaving the county with a $159,801.02 "surplus" instead of over twice that much, as suggested by the survey.

When asked about the remaining funds, which indeed seem to be a "surplus," Mrs. Wilson replied that she thought the money was needed since the county "is in dire need of a place for dumping."

Green replied to the same question by saying that the county is usually down to $35,000 to $40,000 by the time revenue starts coming in the fall. He added, "If it doesn't rain, we might not get any revenue this fall."

grant, according to an Associated Press report.

The 18-member governing session of the local church issued the following statement:

"The Session of the Broadway Presbyterian Church ... supports the action of the 183rd General Assembly meeting in Rochester, New York, questioning the propriety of the $10,000 grant to the Angela Davis Defense Fund. We affirm the purpose for which the emergency fund for the legal aid was originally established; we recommend that the Council on Church and Race be directed to be more diligent in its duties to insure the expenditure of the fund in accordance with its intended purpose."

In the wake of the controversy, black pastors in the denomination re-imbursed the $10,000 grant to the national council.

America Gives 'No' To Enemy's Proposal

PARIS (AP) — The United States said today the Viet Cong proposal for a U.S. troop withdrawal by the end of the year in exchange for the release of war prisoners is unacceptable in its present form.

In their prepared speeches at the Paris peace talks, the Communist delegates made no direct reply to the U.S. stand. But the North Vietnamese said the plan offers an opportunity to the United States to get out of Vietnam with safety and honor.

The Viet Cong reiterated its position that the sooner U.S. forces withdraw, the sooner the prisoners of war can return to their families.

Ambassador David K. E. Bruce commented that the Viet Cong plan present last Thursday has "some new elements" that the United States and South Vietnam want to explore with the Communists.

Bruce suggested that the 121st session of the talks next Thursday be restricted—that is mainly secret—"free from the glare of publicity and without the need to make public statements except to the degree we mutually agree upon."

At the end of the meeting, Bruce told newsmen that he got a "decided no" to his proposal for a restricted meeting, adding: "I think they wish to continue to use these plenary sessions as a form of propaganda."

Mrs. Nguyen Thi Binh of the Viet Cong said on leaving the meeting: "The American delegate tried to use the question of the nature of the meetings to evade the imperative demands of the people of Vietnam, the United States and the world."

Hanoi's ambassador, Xuan Thuy, commented after the meeting that the U.S. delegate "refused to give a serious response" to the Viet Cong peace plan. He said the American delegate was trying to deceive public opinion and block progress at the conference by refusing to set a date for withdrawal of U.S. forces.

Both Bruce and South Vietnamese Pham Dang Lam said a week-long analysis of the peace package did not show changes in the basic Communist demands. But Bruce said that if the proposals mean Hanoi and the Viet Cong are ready for serious negotiations, this is welcome.

Bruce said the demands for withdrawal of all U.S. and other non-Vietnamese forces by the end of the year "are so sweeping and categorical in nature that we cannot possibly accept your arbitrary determination that they must be agreed to by us without any discussion or negotiation upon them."

In demanding the U.S. troop withdrawal, the Viet Cong said this must be done "without posing any condition whatsoever."

Bruce said the Communist "offer to agree on the modalities" of safe withdrawal and release of prisoners after a date for withdrawal has been named is unclear and may be merely a variation of your previous statement that the parties "will engage at once in discussion" on these questions, not necessarily committing you to the course of action implied this point, as well as others you have presented, requires clarification.

"On the prisoners of war issue itself," Bruce continued, "we note that you do not deal with the release of those prisoners captured by your forces or forces under your control in Laos and Cambodia. We continue to hold you responsible for the release of these men and for the provision of whatever information you have on all of our men captured and missing in action throughout Indochina."

Bruce said that examination of the Viet Cong plan "makes it evident that questions arising from their contents necessitate serious negotiation between all parties concerned. We wish to explore them further with you and in subsequent meetings we will be seeking clarification on specific points."

"You have asserted that your proposals are intended as major initiatives," he added, "and we recognize that they deal with matters requiring serious discussion. You cannot, however, insist that they form the only basis for such discussions."

Bruce emphasized that the United States is ready to discuss any points raised by the Communists and expects them to take the same attitude.

"These meetings," Bruce said, "must stop being used by you simply for propaganda purposes and must be devoted instead to constructive interchanges."

Lam countered the Viet Cong plan with a call for immediate and unconditional release of all prisoners of war, establishment of a general cease-fire "and a timetable for the withdrawal of all the external forces," meaning North Vietnamese in South Vietnam as well as the Americans and other foreign troops fighting on Saigon's side.

The South Vietnamese delegate told the Viet Cong's Mrs. Nguyen Thi Binh her peace plan was "faulty because of its ambiguity on what you would be prepared to do." He posed a series of questions:

"Does the solution which you propose not aim at obtaining the total disengagement of the allied forces within a six-month period, while there is no mention of a parallel disengagement of North Vietnamese forces, either from South Vietnam, Laos or Cambodia?"

"What relationship is there between the release of the prisoners of war and the assistance which South Vietnam receives for its defense?"

Referring to the Viet Cong proposal for withdrawal of U.S. and other foreign forces, the South Vietnamese ambassador continued: "Will the fighting not continue in conditions advantageous for you since the armed forces of the Republic of Vietnam, with only their own means, will have to face the aggression carried out by the North Vietnamese and their auxiliary forces which will remain in place, which will have at their disposal the entire military potential of North Vietnam, retaining the considerable and unlimited aid from the countries of the Communist bloc, particularly Communist China and the U.S.S.R., and which will continue to use with impunity the Lao and Khmer (Cambodian) territories to this effect?"

Discussing ABM

By FRANK CREPEAU
Associated Press Writer

HELSINKI (AP) — The fifth round of the strategic arms limitation talks — SALT — between the Soviet Union and the United States got off to a good start today, conference sources reported.

They said the opening session at the Soviet Embassy indicated "strong, positive agreement to get ahead" and that both sides "seemed anxious to make progress on the basis of the May 20 announcement by both governments."

The May 20 announcement said the two nuclear powers had reached an understanding to concentrate this year on limiting deployment of antiballistic missiles—ABM—and also to agree on measures to limit offensive strategic weapons.

The first full session lasted about an hour and there was then an informal session of about 45 minutes. The next full meeting was set for Tuesday at the American Embassy and there was agreement that technical working groups would be set up.

The first meeting began with general statements by Gerard Smith, chief negotiator for the United States, and Deputy Foreign Minister Vladimir Semenov, head of the Soviet delegation. Both said Wednesday they were seeking concrete results in this round of talks.

St. Louis Problem

Seek Redistricting Plan

BULLETIN

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The 20-member commission to redistrict Missouri's 163 House of Representatives districts will either have a tentative plan by noon Friday or go home.

The commission locked itself behind closed doors Thursday afternoon in its final attempt to resolve differences.

Commission Chairman Richard Howe, R-Canton, said the strict executive session was aimed at eliminating "phone calls and so forth from legislators who don't want their districts eliminated."

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Redistricting Missouri's 163 House districts headed for more trouble today as the 20-member commission tried for agreement on an interim map.

Greene County is the problem this time with Republican Commissioner Ted Scott of Buffalo and Democratic Commissioner Leroy Franks of Springfield refusing to agree on distribution of votes there.

Scott told the Associated Press the commission had best "think about Greene County" today and get differences settled.

Commission Chairman Richard Howe, R-Canton, agreed to make it the first order of business as the commissioners convened.

Howe said the commission hoped to have a decision today on whether a plan could be drawn or if the commission should go home and let the supreme court commissioners do the job. He suggested Franks and Scott sit down with some other commissioners to work out the districts.

Scott said Franks had refused to show him his proposed statewide map and he had yet to see Franks' map of the city of Springfield and Greene County in the 7th Congressional District.

"The way it is now," Scott said, "the Republicans would lose two representatives in the 7th." He said Reps. Wayne Groener, R-Republic, Donald L. Gann, R-Ozark and Garnett A. Kelly, R-Norwood, would have to run in the same district if Franks' map were accepted. Scott said Franks was trying to create a strong Democratic district.

"In all fairness," Scott said, "few, if any of the commission affiliated with either party would go along with Franks' suggestion."

The commission worked late Wednesday night to resolve differences in troubled areas.

Late Wednesday, Commission Chairman Richard E. Howe, R-Canton, and vice chairman Hal E. Hunter, D-New Madrid, agreed that a final decision should be reached by Thursday afternoon—one way or the other.

The commission, torn by partisan politics since its initial efforts to name leaders, continued to butt heads Wednesday as the final hour for filing a tentative map neared.

Hearings must be held 15 days after the filing of an interim plan. Howe said earlier he hoped hearings could be in Jefferson City where most of the commission meetings have been held.

Fluoridation Debate Renewed in Session

Fluoridation of Sedalia's water supply, center of a controversy 20 years ago, was urged by local dentists at a meeting of the Sedalia Water Board Wednesday night.

Members of the Sedalia Dental Society asked the board to give serious study to plans for adding the chemical, which reduces tooth decay, to the city's water.

Board chairman Herb Taylor noted that Booneville installed a fluoridation system at a cost of $1.03 per million gallons for the chemical and no expense at all to consumers. The water department in that city put the program into effect without a public vote and met only small opposition, he said.

Dr. B. E. Cline recalled that attempts to give Sedalia fluoridated water in the late 1940's and early 1950's were rebuffed at the polls with the Chamber of Commerce providing the main opposition.

Fluoridation was a key issue during the "red scare" of the 1950's, with some people viewing it as a Communist plot to poison America's drinking water.

Dr. Cline stated that today every legitimate U.S. medical and dental association favors fluoridation as an acceptable health safeguard. He also noted that all federal installations and military bases require fluoridated water supplies.

Board members agreed to investigate a fluoridation program, and the dentists offered studies on the results of similar programs in other cities.

Besides Dr. Cline, other Dental Society members who addressed the board were Dr. Leonard Shackles, president, Dr. Ronald Shuler and Dr. O. J. Durnell.

The board rejected a request from Gene Chaplin, owner of Western View Estates trailer park, West Main Street Road, for a city water line to be run to the edge of that property. The board noted that water lines must terminate in the center of property, and did not believe an exception to the rule could be made.

Chaplin said the State Health Department had warned that water in wells serving the trailer park might become contaminated if corrective measures were not taken.

He said his company did not have enough money at present to improve the wells or pay for a water line to run to the center of the park. Taylor had noted that cost of a line to the center would be about $10,000.

In the only other business before the board, bids for a new auxiliary pump, were tabled until a comparison could be made.

Dieter's Dessert—Fruit

Slimline Fruit Desserts

Take advantage of all the delicious fresh fruits that are plentiful in the summer months. Summer Custard, an egg custard poured over peaches and strawberries, is easy to make and transforms a single fruit dessert into mealtime magic.

Most novices at the diet game fail to take a most important factor into consideration — human nature. Crash diets that deprive may work at first and the new dieter may lose weight fast. But this kind of dieting is almost impossible to stay with, can be harmful to the health — and will certainly affect the disposition. Eating well is a basic human satisfaction.

The most effective way to diet for keeps is to stick with low-calorie foods that please. Inexperienced dieters try to cut out potatoes, bread, sweets or all three. But carbohydrates are an essential nutrient — and generally the best diet is to cut down, not out. In fact, sugar has fewer calories than you might imagine — only 18 calories to the spoonful. Provide yourself with some delicious low-calorie desserts that end meals on a high satisfaction level and have moderate helpings.

All summer long, desserts made with fresh fruits are an absolute delight and weigh in with moderate calorie counts. Summer Custard is as satisfying a dessert as you might wish and a serving offers just 115 calories. Easy to make, too. It's just simple custard served over sugared peaches and strawberries — and a light, refreshing after-dinner treat.

Baked Alaska is a specialty of fine hotels and restaurants and there's a wonderful low-calorie fruit version. It is an amusing combination of hot and cold — hot browned meringue over chilled fruit. Cantaloupe Puff consists of cantaloupe halves filled with strawberries and blueberries topped with a baked meringue. The heavy meringue prevents the heat from reaching the fruit — and you have delicate chilled fruit with a hot sweet topping.

Best of all, the whole family will enjoy these special fruit desserts. They take the deprivation out of dieting and provide sweet treats all summer long.

SUMMER CUSTARD

2 eggs
¼ cup sugar
2 cups skimmed milk
½ teaspoon salt
1½ teaspoons vanilla
1 pint strawberries, washed, hulled and halved
1 tablespoon sugar
3 cups sliced peaches
1 tablespoon sugar
Beat eggs in top of double boiler until well blended. Beat in ¼ cup sugar. Stir in skimmed milk and salt. Cook over simmering water, stirring almost constantly, until custard is thick enough to coat a metal spoon. Remove from water and stir in vanilla. Chill.

Sprinkle strawberries with 1 tablespoon sugar and sprinkle peaches with 1 tablespoon sugar. Place peaches in bottom of serving bowl and strawberries on top. Pour chilled custard over fruit. Makes 8 servings, 115 calories each.

CANTALOUPE PUFF

1 cantaloupe
1 cup strawberries
½ cup blueberries
1 tablespoon sugar
½ lime or lemon
3 egg whites
Cut cantaloupe in half crosswise; scoop out seeds. Combine strawberries and blueberries; sprinkle with 1 tablespoon sugar and mix lightly. Squeeze lime juice over cantaloupe halves and fill with fruit mixture.

Beat egg whites until foamy. Gradually add 4 teaspoons sugar and beat until very stiff. Spread meringue over the fruit in the melon taking care to seal the edges to prevent shrinkage. Place cantaloupe halves on baking sheet. Bake at 400 degrees for 5 minutes or until meringue is golden. Serve warm or chilled; cut each half into 2 pieces. Makes 4 servings, 115 calories each.

GRAPE FLAMBE

1 cup halved, seedless green grapes
1 cup halved, seeded Emperor or Tokay grapes
2 tablespoons sugar
1 small cinnamon stick, broken up
2 tablespoons brandy
Place grapes in blazer pan or crepe pan. Sprinkle with sugar and add the broken cinnamon stick. Place over moderately low flame. Stir until the sugar dissolves and the resulting liquid begins to bubble. Add brandy and ignite, stirring until the flame burns out. Makes 4 servings, 85 calories each.

Easy Way to Mend Drapery Draw Cord

By POLLY CRAMER

DEAR POLLY — A salesman in a drapery shop told me this good way to replace a broken draw cord which might be interesting to those who have had the frustrating experience of trying to restring one or paid the cost of having it done.

Place the broken cord end to end with the new one. I think nylon wears longer than cotton, smoothly wrap a strong tape around the two until they are one. Draw out the old cord, which in turn draws in the new one. Draw out cial handling to the clamps which must be loosened to pull the cord through and then retighten when the length of the pull cords is adjusted. — BETTY

Polly's Problem

DEAR POLLY — I would like to know how to clean screens that are permanently attached to apartment windows and have not been cleaned for 15 years. Needless to say they are very dirty. — MRS. L. A. M.

DEAR POLLY — My Pet Peeve is that I do wish all the dresses of one size in a certain department were hung together. I can only wear one size but often have to go to as many as seven racks where they may be separated because of price or materials. I would even like to see formals and casual clothes in one size placed close together rather than have to see one thing here, another there and probably forget the first thing I liked before I get to the last rack. — MRS. E. J. G.

DEAR POLLY — I had the same problem as Mrs. B. J. F. as my granddaughter scribbled with chalk on my brick fireplace. My husband, a brick mason, told me to take a quart of vinegar and clean the bricks. I did and it worked beautifully. Not only cleaned them but made the brick really shine. — MRS. C. T. C.

Inmates Plan To Get Degrees

EDITORS: This is the second of two stories on a new college training program at Missouri's Alcoa Intermediate Reformatory near Jefferson City.

By JANE ERICKSON
Associated Press Writer

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — A new college training program at Missouri's Alcoa Intermediate Reformatory near Jefferson City is being guided by two professors from the University of Missouri's Rolla campus, Dr. David Hentzel and Robert Greene. Hentzel teaches courses in economics and Greene instructs in English courses.

Since 80 per cent of crimes today are being committed by persons 25 years old or younger, Hentzel and reformatory superintendent Ray French agree this is the age to readjust or redirect lives.

"If we don't," Hentzel said, "they will be seven miles down the road..." referring to the nearby main prison.

This reporter picked four inmate-college students at random to get reactions to the program.

Three of the four plan to go on and get a degree when they get out. The fourth said he was more interested in vocational training—but got to thinking about education because of the college course he is enrolled in.

"I go up for parole soon," said one of the four—a stocky youth who had two years of college before being sentenced seven months ago. "The biggest part of my parole plan is going back to school... I really want my degree now."

Another, who had only a high school education when he came to Alcoa nine months ago, said he hoped to study journalism. He said he "hated English with a passion" in high school, but the college course has given him new insight. He loves to read and wants to write.

"I blew a pretty good trumpet before—I mean I was working as a musician," he said. "I hope maybe I can get a job with a good group and earn money to go on to college when I get out of here in October. I'd like to learn more about music, too—you know, theory and all that..."

"I think a man ought to do what he likes 'cause he won't do good unless he likes his work," was the opinion of the one who does not plan to go on to college. He has served a year and a half at Alcoa and will be released in October.

"I like machinery—diesel machinery especially—and I want to go to a vocational rehabilitation school and learn more about them..."

The fourth—and the most vocal of the group—had 15 college credit hours before going to Alcoa a year ago. He is facing a second two-year term when he finishes the present one, but speaks optimistically about his hopes to become a social worker.

"I get through—take a breath—start again," he said, adding he hopes to get a parole so he can start on his plan before then. His only bitterness seemed to be the seven months he spent in jail before his case came up.

"I'd have finished one sentence six months ago if I had been credited for that time... I pleaded guilty from the start

... but I sat seven months waiting..."

"I want to be a social worker because I've been there..."

The young black theorized most social workers have "too much book" in their counseling. He said he thinks too much time is spent trying to figure out why a crime was committed and too little in picking up from the now to a future for the convicted man.

"Once you get in trouble, everyone tries to figure out why—they want you to give account," he said. He hopes to be the type of social worker who can find a solution, not a reason.

"Student reaction has been tremendous," Hentzel said of the over-all program as well as the 39 Alcoa college enrollees. "They are intelligent—and most of all—it is time people realize they are human beings."

Hentzel challenges anyone to put a price tag on the self-esteem education and a better job can give a man beginning again. Then, too, there is his economic theory that it is cheaper for all Missourians if prisoners don't come back.

Ann Landers

Mom Can't Regulate Son's Life

Dear Ann Landers: I am positive our 18-year-old son is having an affair with the woman next door. She is in her middle 30's—married, no children. The woman's husband is a serious business man and probably has no idea what's going on.

I first got wind of this affair several weeks ago when I saw my son sneaking into her house by the side door. It was after school and he had told me had band practice. I thought it was a little odd because he was having practice three or four times a week when it used to be only on Mondays.

When I told my husband his response shocked me. He said, "It's better than fooling around with a dumb 15-year-old." Then he added, "In the fall the kid goes away to college. He needs some experience."

Last night I told him I knew what was going on. He refused to confirm or deny it and said, "Please mind your own business." Should I go to the woman and tell her to leave our son alone? — Frantic.

the family over there is enough. Stay home.

There are certain things a mother can't do much about, and the sex life of her 18-year-old son is among them. Your husband should, however, make sure the boy is well informed.

Dear Ann Landers: What is your opinion of the following question: Is it square to wear a Phi Beta Kappa key? I am not referring to the student who has just earned one and is still aglow. I mean a man or woman well over 35.

Two people in our crowd wouldn't dream of stepping out of the house without their "brain badges." Exhibit A got her Key at Smith at least 20 years ago. Exhibit B got his at Harvard about the same time. The lady wears her key as a pin. The man's key dangles from his watch chain.

The consensus of the group is that a person who cannot leave the house without his symbol of academic brilliance is insecure and needs to advertise the fact that he was smart in school. Right or wrong? — Philadelphia Inquiry.

who wear Phi Beta Kappa keys do so out of habit. The younger ones who wear keys are letting you know they earned it. I see nothing wrong with either. It seems, to me, however, that the essence of class, is to earn the key and leave it in the jewelry box.

Dear Ann Landers: My mother is making a damned fool of herself. She is keeping house for a man who is up in years and well off financially. She refuses to take any money because she says he's a "dear friend." Mother is 50 but could pass for younger. Once or twice a week she sleeps over there and Dad has to cook for himself and sleep alone.

Mother says this man is going to leave her everything he has but I think she is mistaken. He has a niece who lives in a nearby town, and I believe the law reads that kin comes before outsiders. Please tell me if the niece could break his will if Mom is in it, as she seems to think. Since Mom is married and might be proven an immoral woman, is the law against her? — Maxine.

play lawyer. The laws vary by state and your mother should get the answers from an attorney—if she wants them. This I can tell you, however—any woman who is doing housework for free, in anticipation of being remembered in a will, is indeed a fool.

Beer Still Preferred Over Use of Laxatives

Dr. Lawrence Lamb, M.D.
Dear Dr. Lamb — I have a constipation problem. I was advised to drink two bottles of beer every night before retiring. I started this a number of years ago and it helped. Is there any harm in this? Will it cause cancer?

Dear Reader — I don't usually recommend the regular use of alcohol. However, there are certain medical indications for it. If two bottles of beer at night have relieved your constipation, that is better than becoming a slave to the laxative habit. Beer should not replace developing a good bowel habit and a proper diet. It also has lots of calories. Perhaps this is no problem to you but for some people it is. Beer does not cause cancer.

Dear Dr. Lamb — Is it possible for a rather fat young lady to carry a baby for nine whole months and not know of her condition until labor pains start and she goes to the hospital emergency room to find out what is wrong and the doctor tells her she is about to have a baby? She is 16.

Dear Reader — Yes, I've seen it happen in some young girls not so fat. Often the periods are not regular early in life and, if the girl isn't properly informed, it can be quite a shock for all concerned, particularly the poor girl.

Dear Dr. Lamb — I am 67 years old. Every night I wake up with my head and neck soaking wet with perspiration. The time is three or four in the morning. What would be the cause of this nuisance?

Dear Reader — Sweating is one of the mechanisms to lower body temperature or to prevent accumulation of excess body heat. Throughout a 24-hour period, the volume of sweat from a normal adult varies from one to three pints. The evaporation of sweaty fluid from the skin works like an evaporation air conditioner. The first consideration is whether or not you are too hot at night. This could be a simple matter of a hot bedroom or too many bed or night clothes.

Aside from these normal reasons for sweating, some individuals do have illnesses that cause night sweat. To determine whether or not you have such a condition would require a complete medical examination.

Arabs, Israelis In Clash

TEL AVIV (AP) — Arab guerrillas and Israeli forces clashed on two fronts today while police and troops searched Arab villages for terrorists who fired rockets into a town nine miles west of Tel Aviv, killing two persons and wounding 20 others.

A military spokesman said guerrillas fired bazookas from Syria at an Israeli force in the occupied Golan Heights. An Arab was killed and an Israeli soldier was wounded in the ensuing battle, he said.

Another Israeli patrol came under bazooka and light-arms fire near Zarit, on the Lebanese border. The spokesman said the Israelis replied with artillery fire but no casualties were reported.

The rocket attack Wednesday night on Petah Tikvah, a community of 80,000, killed a 5-year-old girl and a woman. One rocket made a direct hit on a hospital for the chronically ill and three others ripped into a school and two houses.

All Arab villages within 50 miles of the city were put under curfew, and a number of suspects were picked up.

Reliable sources reported that the rocket launcher apparently used in the attack had been found and gave the location, but the military censor deleted the information from dispatches.

"The terrorists have found themselves incapable of attacking military targets and they don't seem to care where their shells fall," said Defense Minister Moshe Dayan, who visited the scene.

Townpeople mobbed him, shouting for revenge.

Dayan told newsmen the 130mm rockets had an average range of 14 miles and could have been fired from any of hundreds of uninhabited areas.

"The terrorists most probably came from Jordan," he said, "and probably had support from Arabs on the West bank." The Jordanian territory west of the Jordan River which Israel seized in the 1967 war starts five miles west of Petah Tikvah.

"As long as the state of war continues and terrorist activities persist," Dayan said, "it will be difficult to insure that things of this kind don't happen."

In case more rockets were fired fire-fighting units and ambulances sped to the scene.

The rockets fell in an area 200 yards square. The worst damage was at the hospital, where one of the shells hit a three-bed ward. A woman lost a leg in that explosion. One rocket did not explode, and army experts defused it.

It was the heaviest attack on a civilian target inside Israel since the Arab guerrilla bombing of Tel Aviv's bus station last November.

Soft Drink Tax

Drawing Fire From Bottlers

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., (AP) — A proposed soft drink tax to finance an expanded conservation program drew the opposition of the Missouri Soft Drink Association today.

The board of directors adopted a resolution opposing the tax proposed June 26 by the Citizens Committee for Conservation at a meeting in Columbia.

The board said it opposed the special tax "because it will be an extremely inflationary increase in the consumer's cost of buying soft drinks."

"Experience in the three other states where a special soft drink tax has been imposed has resulted in loss of sales, with resulting loss in employment, loss of the standard tax incomes such as income, sales, real estate and personal property taxes."

Illegal Swim Could Prove To Be Costly

The spirit of adventure, coupled with the extraordinary hot weather Wednesday apparently offered too much temptation to two young Sedalia men.

Around 10:50 p.m. Wednesday police received a call indicating the two men were seen going into the bathhouse at Liberty Park Pool, which had closed at 9 p.m.

Arrested by police were Michael G. Roberts, 19, Route 1, and Paul J. Muller, 20, Sixth and Montauk. Both were charged with swimming in the pool after hours and were released under $50 bond. They are scheduled to appear in Municipal Court July 16.

Police Report

Four separate reports of vandalism were called in to Sedalia police Thursday morning from residents observing damage to their property which had occurred overnight.

Hilda Adams, 1808 South Missouri, said that someone had broken her picket fence.

Mrs. Donald L. Sprinkle, 1720 South Missouri, told police a bird bath in her yard had been broken off at its base.

Mrs. Carl Speiser, 1000 West 16th, said she noticed Thursday morning that profanities had been written on the sidewalk in front of her home.

L. M. Robertson, 1805 South Harrison, told police that tomato plants had been uprooted in his back yard and flower pots had been turned upside down.

Chris Hejtmank, 2503 West 11th, reported to police at 6:50 p.m. Wednesday that his bicycle had been stolen from Liberty Park while he was swimming.

The bicycle was valued at $50.

Martin Klein, 47, 1205 South Marvin, reported to police Wednesday that someone took a complete set of hand tools, valued at $300, from his truck late Monday night or early Tuesday morning. The truck had been parked nearby the Klein residence.

Fires In The City

Fire Chief Emmett Vaught said city firemen have been making at least two trips daily to Chaney's Seed House, South Highway 65, in the wake of a $50,000 fire early Tuesday morning.

Vaught said he and his men were monitoring the situation to see that the fire does not begin again. "No damage has resulted from the other fire runs, but we have had to wet down smoldering soybeans on several occasions," he said. Vaught said that burning embers still under the rubble were causing some of the problem.

"I know workmen at Chaney's have taken several truckloads of the hot beans and seed from the seedhouse area, but there is still a lot of work to do around the place," he said.

Efforts in fighting the Chaney fire were hampered by the lack of water hydrants in the area. It was necessary for pumper trucks to make several trips to fill up with water about a quarter of a mile from the fire and then return to the scene.

Says Army Will Remain Disciplined

FT. RILEY, Kan. (AP) — The commanding general of the U.S. Fifth Army told 174 college officials Wednesday that there will be no compromising of standards in an all-volunteer Army.

Lt. Gen. George V. Underwood Jr., spoke to college representatives who are reviewing work at Ft. Riley by 3,100 ROTC cadets from 112 colleges and universities in 27 states. They will continue their observations through Friday morning.

"We are determined to do everything in our professional power to make Army life more attractive, but we are going to do it within the framework of discipline and professionalism," Gen. Underwood said.

He said professional military men were realists enough to know that if they get the current two-year draft extension it will be their last and they must use the two-year period to find a workable volunteer system.

Underwood said there is a disturbing mood toward the military.

"It's not that we think the American Army should be immune from the kind of healthy criticism that purified and typified democracy," Underwood said. "But we are concerned that this rather unwholesome and uncharitable anti-military trend, if it continues long enough unchecked, could eventually undermine the very incentives for national military service in this country."

Underwood said if this happens a priceless national asset will go down the drain and the country will indeed be in trouble.

He said the two keys to an all-volunteer Army are money and an improved public attitude.

Teamsters Electing President

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Frank E. Fitzsimmons rode thunderous Teamsters convention support toward virtually certain election today to a five-year term as chief of the world's biggest and richest labor union.

The soft-spoken, 63-year-old "Fitz" confidently steered past scattered, preliminary opposition in winning himself a $25,000 salary increase to $125,000 a year, a $2 monthly hike in dues for the union's two million members and sole power to direct Teamsters political spending.

Fitzsimmons ignored the jibe of Theodore Daley, his only announced opponent for the union presidency, that the salary hike "is too rich for my blood." He defended the dues increase as vital to pay more than $5 million a year in strike benefits and other services to union members.

"If $125,000 is too rich for your blood, I suggest we need some new blood in this union," a Fitzsimmons supporter shouted at Daley, and most of the 2,100 delegates roared approval of the salary hike.

Fitzsimmons became president automatically June 21 when James R. Hoffa sent his resignation from his federal prison cell at Lewisburg, Pa., where he is serving 13 years for jury tampering and mail fraud.

In Washington, meanwhile, the U.S. Parole Board moved up its reconsideration of Hoffa's parole after more than four years in prison, amid persistent union rumors here that it was part of a deal with the government for Hoffa's giving up all his Teamsters posts.

Daley, 42-year-old secretary-treasurer of Yonkers, N.Y., Local 445 protested giving Fitzsimmons power to determine all union political spending.

"Brother Daley was never a friend of Jimmy Hoffa," shouted one convention delegate later when Daley tried unsuccessfully to write a $50,000 salary for Hoffa into a provision naming his honorary president emeritus for life. Daley's proposal was defeated resoundingly after Vice President Einar Mohn said it might hurt, rather than help, Hoffa's bid for freedom.

High union sources, who as late as convention eve still feared a disruptive pro-Hoffa emotional reaction against Fitzsimmons, expressed surprise at the ease of the transfer of power.

Chidester Is Sentenced In Drug Case

Albert Chidester Jr., 20, formerly of Wilson's Trailer Court, pleaded guilty to charges of selling and possessing hallucinogenic drugs Wednesday in Pettis County Circuit Court.

He was sentenced to three years in the custody of the State Department of Corrections by Circuit Court Judge Frank Meyer, and given credit for the 186 days he has spent in the Pettis County Jail.

Chidester, represented by Atty. William F. Brown, withdrew an earlier plea of not guilty. A jury trial had been scheduled, but was called off, according to Pettis County Sheriff Emmett Fairfax, after Chidester indicated he would plead guilty.

Chidester was originally taken into custody by Sedalia police in June of 1970, after a local youth told officers he bought LSD tablets from him.

Repeat Omaha Violence

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Violence broke out for a second night Wednesday between an estimated 300 young people and police in a protest over a curfew placed on Memorial Park.

The violence was centered in Elmwood Park, directly across Dodge Street, the east-west thoroughfare, from Memorial Park which was the scene of a clash Tuesday night.

Two policemen and a photographer were reported injured. A spokesman for WOW-TV in Omaha said police had confirmed photographer Pete Petrashek was struck by police during the melee. Hospital officials said Wednesday night all three men suffered from contusions or lacerations to the head and were treated and released. Some of the young demonstrators also suffered minor injuries.

Young people gathered at Elmwood earlier in protest of a curfew placed upon Memorial Park by the Omaha City Council which ordered the park cleared by 8 p.m.

Fireworks were thrown into Dodge Street from the crowd and taunts were shouted at police throughout the evening. Some of the youths darted through traffic across Dodge Street to Memorial Park only to be ordered back by police.

Shortly after 10 p.m. police began using tear gas and swinging nightsticks to break up the crowd.

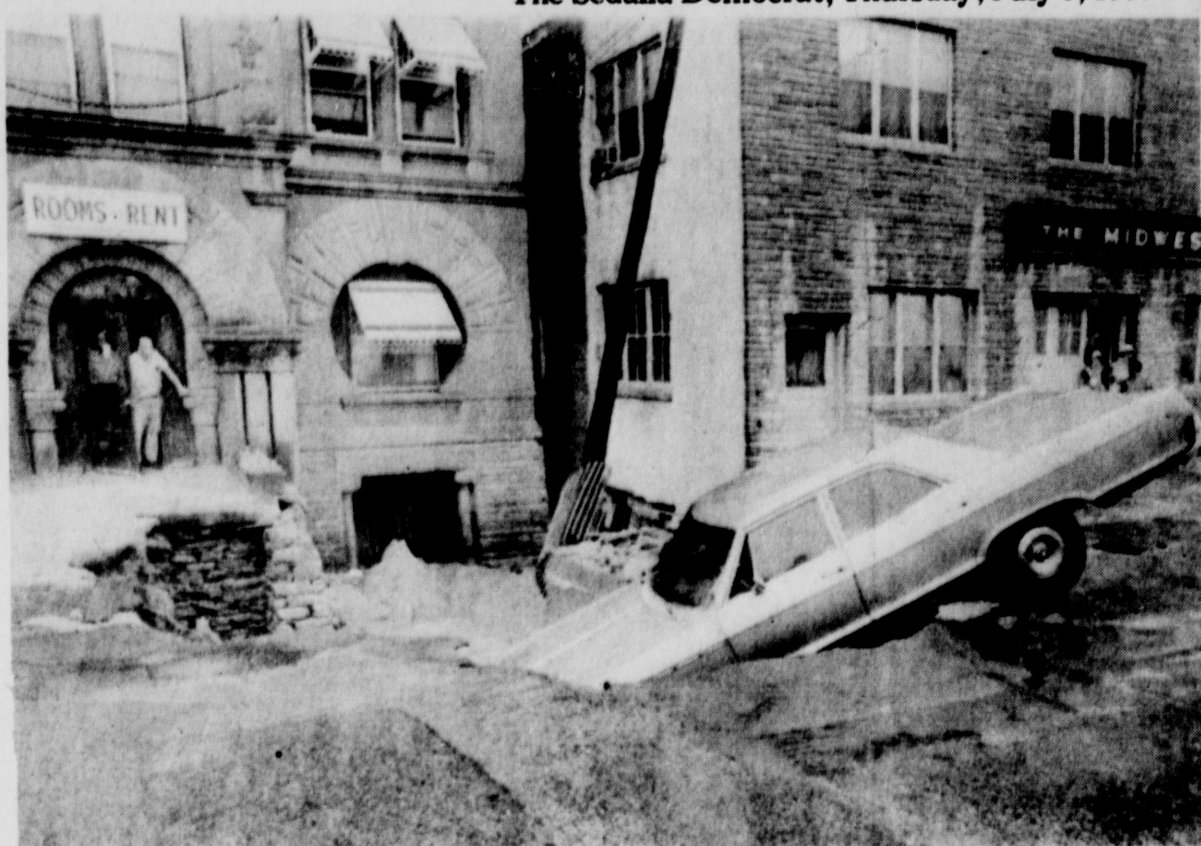

Some demonstrators took shelter in the yards of private property owners. One newsman saw a property owner warn young people to leave his property and then level a gun at them.

Two police cruisers were reported damaged in the parking lot of the University of Nebraska at Omaha Administration Building. At least four arrests were made in connection with that incident and the wrecking of another cruiser which was struck by a molotov cocktail and then pushed down a ravine near U-N-O into a tree.

Police had been on the alert following the Tuesday night rock and bottle throwing melee which Omaha Mayor Eugene Leahy said was "intolerable" Wednesday in a prepared statement.

Minneapolis Earthquake

A parked car appears to have gone through an earthquake this week in Minneapolis as the ground opened up trying to swallow it. Actually, a line of severe thunderstorms moved through the Twin Cities, causing power outages and cave-ins such as this when roads were flooded. (UPI)

Student Reports

Area students who received degrees recently from Northeast Missouri State College, Kirksville, are Ronie Lloyd Holtsman, Bowling Green, B. S. degree in business administration and mathematics; Helen Ann Bliefnick, B. S. E. in business education, Patricia Lynn Parks, B. S. E. in elementary education, Richard Steven Spellman, B. S. in business administration and accounting and Karen Jane Harris, B. S. E. in elementary education, all of Salisbury; David S. Paulsen, Sunrise Beach, B. S. in chemistry and Deitra Selaine Rouse, Versailles, B. S. E. in physical education.

Elizabeth Bronson, Route 4, and Mark Mahnen, Salisbury, recently participated in a one-week session on careers at the University of Missouri-Rolla.

While on campus, they attended sessions in 13 areas of engineering, six areas of science and seven areas of liberal arts.

The purpose of the program is to show the student what a career as an engineer or a scientist or in liberal arts would offer. The emphasis is on their choice of a college study program and the career that follows it.

Gary W. Fleming, 407 West 18th, received his Doctor of Law Degree at June commencement exercises at Washington University in St. Louis.

David Williams, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Williams, of Hughesville and Connie Cordes daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clay B. Cordes, 1935 East Seventh, have been named to the spring semester honor roll at Southwest Baptist College, Bolivar.

Janett Lindecrantz, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. Lindecrantz, 1201 South Lamine, has been named to the Dean's honor list for the 1970-71 spring term at Bethany College, Lindsborg, Kan.

Kathy Hunter presented an account of her trip to Washington D. C. at the Monday meeting of the Quisenberry Hustlers 4-H Club at Quisenberry School.

Demonstrations on cooking were given by Lisa Mergen, Barbara Geiser, Etta Geiser and Annette Mergen.

A program on conservation has been planned for the next meeting which will be held Aug. 2 at the school.

Dwight DeWitt, son of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer DeWitt, Route 5, has again received a Regents' Scholarship to Central Missouri State College. As a freshman at CMSC this year, he earned a grade point average of 3.8 on a 4.0 scale, thus entitling him to the scholarship for his second year of college. He is a 1970 graduate of Smithton High School.

In 1970 New York state hatcheries produced and stocked more than 5.7 million trout and salmon totaling 524,000 pounds.

To Begin Orientation Program For Retarded

(Democrat-Capital Service)

MARSHALL — The Saline County Youth Association for the Care of Retarded Children met Tuesday night at the Christian Church in Marshall where they discussed fund-raising projects. Carl Hamby, president, presided.

Dr. Cecil Watson, administrator at the Missouri State School for the Mentally Retarded at Marshall, was guest speaker for the meeting. He stressed that five hours of orientation for at least 10 members was a requirement for the group to become affiliated with the state association.

The organization provides their services to parents of mentally retarded children and receives training in working with the children.

The first orientation meeting will be held at 7 p.m. July 19 in the Baptist Friendship House in Marshall. The meeting is open to all youth ages 13 to 25.

Girl Scout Program Held Here

International Sing-Along

Sandy Milam, center, from Arkansas, led singing recently when Girl Scouts from throughout the United States, Iceland and Puerto Rico toured Missouri as a "Beyond the Arch" group. Assisting with the sing-along at

W. A. McVay and Pat Clark presented a program on Missouri Indians last week at Girl Scout Camp Sacajawea for 35 Girl Scouts and their chaperons who stayed overnight at the lodge on the camp at the end of a ten-day tour of Missouri.

The "Beyond the Arch" group was a national opportunity project offered to Girl Scouts by the Heart of Missouri Girl Scout Council. Their tour began in Columbia, and historical sights throughout Missouri were visited.

Mrs. LaRue Sauers, 710 West Sixth, was one of the chaperons for the tour.

While in Sedalia, the girls were also treated to a horse show by Darrell Wallen at the Missouri State Fairgrounds Coliseum. He is owner and trainer of Blue Moon Stables here. State Fair Secretary, Wilbur Askew also greeted the girls.

Large Bands Return

By MARY CAMPBELL

AP Newsfeatures Writer

Big bands are coming back, in a way, says Terry Richards, vocalist of Chase. And the way is the big sound, from groups like Blood, Sweat and Tears; Chicago, and Chase, who are playing jazz-rock.

Chase is a nine-man group, four trumpets, guitar, drums, organ, bass and vocalist, started by Bill Chase, alumnus of the Maynard Ferguson and Stan Kenton bands plus five years with Woody Herman.

Chase says, "Angel South, the guitarist, was the only one who wasn't into jazz. But he has a perfect conception of what we want. The rock thing has to be right, but to be exciting and swing like jazz. It took looking for guys that were good jazz players that wanted to open their heads up to rock and dig it. We went through two or three guys who thought they wanted to be with us and couldn't. They were so into jazz they didn't have a feel for rock, and it does take a feel to do the rock thing right."

"We sounded like a bunch of jazz musicians trying to play rock for a while."

"But I could tell the first time Angel played with us—he opened up a tune and just kept playing—that he had a jazz conception back there someplace. He'd been a blues-oriented guitar player."

Chase got the idea, while in the Herman band, that he wanted to do something of his own. "I sat down and started writing things. Some of them were before the 'Blood, Sweat and Tears' album. I didn't know about their first album; playing jazz we weren't into that idiom that much. When that record came out, it destroyed me. I thought if I'd only had the money I would have done that a long time ago. It brought all the guys experimenting with me down."

"I went out with Woody again, then, just for the summer—1969—to Europe and a slight tour here with him. I started thinking more. I went into every little club—every place a rock bill was playing—to hear them. I started developing more ideas. I was really thinking of using saxes and trombones then, but I decided not to. I dig trumpets."

When Chase left Herman, he took a job in Las Vegas, conducting a hotel revue. He arranged for a smaller revue, for six instruments, "and I thought how much fun that sound could be. It sort of got my head rolling, what could be done with today's music."

"Sargeant Pepper" really added music to the rock thing. That's when I got torn up by the Beatles and rock."

At first Chase thought he'd have three trumpets, but that sounded too thin, so he added a fourth. He didn't have a vocalist in mind, but he heard Richards in the Unusual 10, a 10-piece dancing, singing group, and added him.

Richards says, "I was free-lancing as a bus boy then, at the same hotel he was. I left the Unusual 10, but didn't want to leave Vegas."

Chase said that at first he didn't even think about whether the group would be commercial. "I was making about $600 a week. I could care less about money then; I just wanted to play. It wasn't until we were heavily into rehearsals that I started thinking this is something we can make some money with and enjoy playing at the same time."

Sedalia's Arnold

Sedalia can boast its very own Arnold the pig thanks to Dale Wilson, Route 3, who began a friendship with the pig six months ago when it was a sick piglet. Now

Arnold needs only to hear his name and he comes on a dead run. These hot summer days he likes to take a snooze, and a massage gives added pleasure.

Teams which were selected to compete at State 4-H Day, Sept. 18, at the State Livestock Judging Center in Columbia include Gene Anderson and Paul Anderson, Smithton; Karen Maxwell, Windsor and Teresa Spickert, Green Ridge; and Jerry and Harlan Reid, Houstonia; Janet Reid, Houstonia and Robert Brandt, LaMonte. An alternate will be Danny Pritchard, Green Ridge.

Young Vote Helped Tax Levy Passage

JASPER, Mo. (AP) — School officials have eight absentee ballots and the 26th amendment to thank for passage of a 51 cent increase in the district's tax levy.

The vote at the polls Wednesday was 445 for, 445 against. Eight absentee ballots all were for the increase.

Superintendent of Schools Danny Houser noted a heavy turnout of 18, 19 and 20-year-old voters — who became eligible only Monday with certification of the 26th amendment to the U.S. Constitution.

Their effect was obvious. On April 6, the levy was defeated 412 to 212. Wednesday's affirmative votes were more than doubled.

The outcome boosts the district's levy to $3.57. It is expected to generate about $31,000 in additional local revenue for the schools and $8,700 in additional state aid.

Each year students from more than 400 schools attend one of the six summer sessions offered at Monmouth College in New Jersey.

On Redistricting

Preisler Seeks Court Move

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Paul W. Preisler of St. Louis has asked the federal courts to step in again to solve Missouri's congressional redistricting plan.

Preisler, a St. Louis attorney who is running as an independent candidate for governor, has filed such suits before and has won several.

In 1969 he got the U.S. Supreme Court to throw out the existing congressional districts as invalid under the one man-one vote doctrine and the legislature finally set up the districts under which Missouri's present congressmen were elected in 1970 — nine Democrats and one Republican.

He used similar arguments Wednesday in a suit filed in U.S. District Court for the Western District of Missouri at Jefferson City. He asked the 8th Circuit Court of Appeals to set up a special three-judge court to hear the case and set up proper new districts to conform with the 1970 census.

Preisler and eight other voters from the St. Louis metropolitan area charged the 1971 Legislature was derelict in its duty in failing to establish equal population districts.

As a result, he said, Sec. of State James C. Kirkpatrick should be enjoined from proceeding with arrangements for the 1972 primary and general elections, the court should declare the present districts invalid and unconstitutional and should set up new districts.

He said present districts vary widely from the average population of 467,739 under the 1970 census. He cited the 8th District of central Missouri as being 136,786 below the ideal and the 9th of northeastern Missouri 83,393 above the norm.

As a result, he said, voters are deprived of equal rights and are discriminated against in violation of both the U.S. and state constitutions.

Hearnes Has Signed Four New Measures

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Gov. Warren E. Hearnes vetoed one bill Wednesday and signed four others.

The bill vetoed was the same as one approved previously to let fleet truck operators conduct their own motor vehicle safety inspections.

Signed were bills to:

- Let doctors of osteopathy organize professional corporations the same as medical doctors and members of other professions.
- Let drainage or levee districts invest idle funds.
- Straighten out procedural differences in appeals from Kansas City municipal and probate courts.
- Correct a grammatical error in the present chiropractic examiner law.

Greenland covers 840,000 square miles.

Schedule Theater Opening

The Sedalia Community Theater Group's first offering, "Dirty Work at the Crossroads," is set for a three-night stand July 21-23 at the State Fair Community College student union.

After four weeks of concentrated work on the Bill Johnson play, rehearsals are in full swing with several areas almost perfected.

However, Miss Joan Baker, directress, said that anyone willing to help would be welcomed and appreciated.

The play itself, a Gay '90s melodrama, tells in laughable style the heart-rendering saga of sweet Nellie Lovelace, played by Kathy Seley, and her tribulations with the evil Munro Murgatroyd, arch-fiend and city slicker, played by Craig Tharp.

Also caught up in the evil works of Murgatroyd are Nellie's mother, the Widow Lovelace, played by Debbie Walker; Adam Oakhart, the stalwart blacksmith's son, played by Chris Marcum; Mrs. Upson Asterbilt, played by Mrs. David Mathews; and Murgatroyd's wife, the songstress Ida Rhinegold, played by Marti Corson.

Other characters include the French maiden Fleurette, played by Maggie Hurtt; Mookie Maguggins, Dan Embree; Leonie Asterbilt, Margaret Swords; and of special importance to any villain's role, the sweet young child Little Nell, played by Joyce Leslie.

Another key figure is pianist David Rayl, who provides the appropriate scene-setting music.

Serving as stage manager and assistant directress is Mrs. David Mathews.

Miss Baker said that anyone willing to help the group should call the SFCC college business office and ask for the following directors: costumes, Lois Christal; scenery, Mac

Nakamura; lighting, Greg Foster; sound, John Land; house manager, David Mathews; make-up, Becky

Studer; and publicity, Tim Proctor.

Poor England: No More Secrets

By ART BUCHWALD

LONDON — There is far more interest in the secret Pentagon Papers in England than one might think.

Melton Bulberry, a British foreign service-type, told me at his club the other day:

Buchwald

"This sort of thing could never happen in England. We have the Official Secrets Act. Anyone who leaks a secret in this country goes straight to the nick." (Jail)

"That's wonderful," I said.

"It is," he agreed. "The only trouble is we have no secrets."

"That's a pity."

He confided in me sadly. "Don't tell anyone, but we haven't had a worthwhile secret since 1956 when we decided to go into Suez."

"That's over 15 years ago," I said.

"Oh, we know it. As a matter of fact, all our secrets since then have been American ones. That's why the Pentagon Paper leaks have been so disturbing."

"How's that?"

"Well if Americans can't keep their secrets, they aren't much use to us are they? I mean to say, if everyone in the world knows the secrets and we're the only ones who have laws forbidding their printing, we look bloody silly, don't we?"

"You don't look good," I admitted.

"There's a big move on in this country now to refuse any future American secrets. Many people believe that England should develop its own secrets or it will become a second class power."

"But isn't that rather expensive?" I said.

"I should say it is. Just the cost of rubber stamps to mark all our documents. Top Secret would take up more than half of England's defense budget."

"But you people are forcing us into it. It was all right when your secrets were confined to only a handful of men high in your government. But when you opened them up to every Tom, Dick and Daniel Ellsberg, then we had to take another look at the situation."

"Is it possible after all these years to develop your own secrets?" I asked my foreign office friend.

"Quite possible," he said huffily. "Oh, we might not have them on the same large scale as the Americans, and they might not be worthy of being stolen by another major power, but I assure you, sir, after proper testing our secrets will have to be reckoned with."

"It seems to me," I said, "that it would be a mistake for Great Britain at this stage to go it alone. While it's true the Americans are leaking like sieves, I would think it's still better to know an important secret of somebody else's than have a secret of your own that no one cares about. Why, if Britain started developing its own secrets every foreign spy in England would flee the country."

"There's always that risk," my friend said. "But at the same time, if we are dependent for our secrets on the United States, we should at least get equal treatment with the New York Times and Washington Post."

"You mean to say you knew nothing about the Pentagon Papers until you saw them in the newspapers?"

"Precisely. Here we are, the only ally that's stood by the United States since World War II, and we know as much about the Vietnam war plans as the United States Congress. That, sir, is no way to treat a friend."

Jackson Testing Opinion

By BRUCE BLOSSAT
NEA News Analyst

WASHINGTON (NEA) — Sen. Henry M. Jackson of Washington will make his key early run in the 81-vote Florida primary next March — if he decides late this year to become an avowed 1972 Democratic presidential bidder.

Jackson's visit to Florida this July will be his fourth there. And his chief field operative, the veteran Hy Raskin, is canvassing the state after a recent probe of Oregon, another major primary state.

Blossat

The focus on Florida obviously reflects Jackson's judgment that he would stand an excellent chance of corraling delegates there in a likely competition with Senators Edmund Muskie, Hubert Humphrey, Birch Bayh, Harold Hughes and possibly others. For the same reason Jackson may give a lot of time to the new Tennessee primary coming up next May 4. Some leaders there have told him he has a real edge right now.

What baffles the cheerful, outgoing Washington senator these days is the small but influential New Hampshire primary.

Just a short time back, Jackson had another exploratory meeting on New Hampshire, conferring for more than an hour with nearly 50 of that state's Democrats, including the 1970 governor nominee, Roger Crowley. But the session, held in Boston, was inconclusive.

Jackson properly figures Muskie has a long leg up on New Hampshire. The polls so indicate. The questions for Jackson are whether he might make a respectable showing, as his supporters contend, and whether he needs to take the risk of trying to build quick credibility as a challenging candidate. At the moment, both the New Hampshire and Florida primaries are set for March 14, but the former probably will change to March 7.

Jackson in July makes his first foray into New Hampshire after long months of fending off appeals from Crowley and others.

The senator shows little sign of slackening pace. He already has hit 20 states, with some stress on the South, Southwest, and West. He has been to crucial California (271 votes) more often than any other candidate.

The pace, the continuing in-flow of money, the field probings of Raskin, and the visible encouragement from key labor men add up to a very serious effort. He is cautiously practical, however, about the well-reported interest shown by AFL-CIO President George Meany and others. In an interview, Jackson said:

"Labor has opened all the doors to me. But they're keeping their options open, too."

The senator's blend of hard-line defense views and domestic liberalism captivates labor and helps him in the South. In his travels, he works hard to keep the balance, to keep his liberal record in plain sight. Bits from his fast trip to West Virginia.

"I'm a liberal ... I believe in doing something for the unfortunate ... I'm a lifelong environmentalist ... As one who fought the late Sen. Joseph McCarthy ..."

Putting together his wish and his judgment, Jackson tells listeners the economy will be the big 1972 issue. He is not alone in arguing that Vietnam, notwithstanding the published Pentagon papers, will probably not figure heavily in the coming campaign.

On the platform, he builds no fires. But audiences like his directness, and the impression he gives of sophisticated competence on issues. Curiously, though, he conveys simultaneously a kind of small-town innocence.

Some observers think his innocence extends to politics, that he can't see how divisive his nomination might be in a party constantly shaken by its ardent left. He doesn't believe it. And there's nothing unsophisticated about the way he draws the cameras down on his effort to prove himself broadly acceptable. He is eager — and he has know-how to match.

Today's Thoughts

Religion that is pure and undefiled before God and the Father is this: to visit orphans and widows in their affliction, and to keep oneself unstained from the world. — James 1:27.

"My sheep hear my voice, and I know them, and they follow me and I give them eternal life, and they shall never perish, and no one shall snatch them out of my hand." — John 10:27, 28.

Too many people are thinking of security instead of opportunity. They seem more afraid of life than death. — James F. Byrnes, former U.S. secretary of state.

One cool judgment is worth a thousand hasty counsels. The thing to do is to supply light and not heat. — Woodrow Wilson.

Will We Stand By As Flat Creek Dies?

An estimated 22,000 fish killed by a gasoline spill into Flat Creek. Numerous other aquatic animals also victims, as well as perhaps other wildlife dependent upon the creek for water.

To all of this the average citizen might well respond with a yawn and a "so what?" After all, Flat Creek already is so polluted that another few thousand gallons of gasoline can't make that much difference.

Exaggerated? Perhaps, but still illustrative of what is the greatest danger we all face in the attempt to clean up the environment. It is the one that instills a sense of futility into environmental challenges, because no one can remember when things were any better.

At one time Flat Creek was different. It was the scene of outings, picnics, swimming parties, and was generally recognized as a good place to fish.

Now it is becoming more and more of an open sewer, polluted by plants, sewage discharges and agricultural runoffs. The Missouri Division of Health has urged people not to swim in it. Indeed, an acquaintance recently experienced a severe reaction that required medical attention after swimming in the creek.

What has happened?

The gasoline spill is only the most graphic illustration of what we have been doing to Flat Creek over the years. An industrial discharge here, some sewage or pesticide here: they all add up to pollution.

Flat Creek has the potential of again becoming a usable stream, serving a wide area with varied recreational benefits. The question is whether we want to use it this way, or prefer to go on viewing it only as a depository for our wastes.

Merry-Go-Round

Army Contractor Has Sloppy Habits

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — The Army, to its credit, has moved quietly to head off what might have become another major arms procurement scandal. Here are the behind-the-scenes details:

Since 1951, the giant Sperry Rand corporation has been operating the Louisiana Army Ammunition Plant at Shreveport where an assortment of bullets and shells are produced.

For years, the company, like many Pentagon contractors, had what every businessman dreams of: a deal on which it couldn't lose. The Army paid the company back whatever it cost to produce the ammunition, plus a percentage profit.

In addition, the Army paid the company varying amounts of money as so-called "awards," which aren't really awards but rewards for doing a good job. Between 1951 and the end of last year, the company cleared about $18 million on the contract.

But a series of documents in our possession indicate that by the middle of last year, Sperry Rand had fallen into sloppy habits. Job safety had become a problem, cost overruns were cropping up and the company was unable to keep track of the government-owned equipment it was using.

For example, a letter from an Army contracting officer to Sperry Rand's plant manager last June contains this blunt statement: "I have come to the conclusion that you do not have adequate control of property."

The letter demanded that the company "purify your records of all missing documents." This is hardly the normal tone of military letters to contractors.

The same month, a memo was sent to the Army ammunition procurement headquarters at Joliet, Ill., by Col. Jerry Cochran, the contracting officer at the Shreveport plant. The subject: cost overruns.

"I have advised the operating contractor of the extreme difficulty of obtaining additional funds for cost overruns," the letter said. "The contractor is aware that the contracting officer's approval is necessary."

Meanwhile, safety was becoming a more serious problem. A review of last year's safety record at the Shreveport facility prompted Cochran to write the plant manager about it.

"Louisiana Army Ammunition Plant had the largest number of disabling injuries of all plants in the Western Division and was the only plant that had a fatality during this period," Cochran said.

An audit last December further buttressed the charge that Sperry Rand was not keeping track of equipment. "Contractor's management has not been able to provide for their own use or for concerned government officials current information required for sound inventory management."

We spoke to Col. Donald Porter of the ammunition procurement headquarters at Joliet about the problems at Shreveport. He admitted there had been cost overruns but he said there had also been several underruns.

Asked if there was any way the company could lose money on the contract on its basis, he acknowledged: "Not hardly." Porter explained, however, that the situation had been "the subject of a special investigation."

The result, he said, was that the company had made several changes in its procedures to eliminate the problems. Moreover, was agreed that the contract for some of the ammunition would be switched to a fixed price basis.

Bacon's Loophole — Where there's a law, according to bureaucratic theorem, there's a loophole. The National Environmental Policy Act, for example, requires all federal agencies to provide the public with "environmental impact statements," which outline the expected effects on the environment of proposed projects. But an enterprising Federal Aviation Administration official, Robert F. Bacon, has found an effective means of limiting the circulation of these statements. He simply charges an exorbitant price for them. Citizens seeking an environmental impact statement on the proposed Palmdale Intercontinental Airport outside Los Angeles were told the standard fee is 50 cents a page. For the 115-page statement, this comes to $57.50 — plus a stiff extra charge if the citizen also wants the accompanying maps.

Press Subsidy — The National Science Foundation, a federal agency with a $620 million budget, has shelled out $200,000 to bail out the financially troubled Science Service. This is a private, nonprofit organization whose chief activity is publishing a reputable and provocative magazine called Science News. The agency subsidized the magazine, according to NSF officer Dr. Albert Rosenthal, to increase public understanding of science. The question was raised whether the government should subsidize the press, said Rosenthal, but "the larger public interest" took precedence. Concurred Science News editor E. G. Sherburne, Jr.: "There's nothing in the grant that would dictate editorial policy."

Inside the Cabinet — For the first time that treasury aides can remember, grits are now being served in the secretary's private dining room. The innovation began after John Connally became treasury secretary.

George Romney, the secretary of housing and urban development, always wears the same blue cardigan sweater when he's working alone in his office. Commerce Secretary Maurice Stans won't let his wife wear the choker he bought for her in Kenya. It's made of individual python vertebrae separated by beads. He's afraid conservationists might accuse him of contributing to the eradication of pythons. After Transportation Secretary John Volpe moved into the fashionable Watergate Apartments, with the exclusive shops on the ground floor, his daughter Rotondi dropped by for a visit. Turning to her mother, Mrs. Jean Volpe Rotondi cracked: "Just because you were born in Italy, do you have to live over a store?"

Every once in awhile, the afternoon bridge game at New York's Cavendish Club looks like the final round of a national championship. The players today include Ira Rubin sitting East and Tobias Stone in the South seat.

Rubin's two-diamond overcall was sound indeed, but he believed in sound overcalls. Stone's jump to four spades was one of those multipurpose bids. He did not know which side could make what but he wanted to put pressure on his opponents. Of course, Stone was willing to have his partner had a rockcrusher.

North had no problem and Ira decided to try to beat four spades, rather than sacrifice at five diamonds.

Ira overtook his partner's queen of diamonds with the king and decided there was just one chance to beat the contract. He shifted to his queen of hearts. Stone won with his king and saw that Ira was surely planning to get in with the ace of spades and put his partner on lead with a diamond.

It would have worked, since West held the diamond 10, but Stone spoiled Ira's plan. He led his queen of clubs, continued with a club to dummy's ace and another high club. Ira ruffed, but Stone was ready with the crusher. He chucked his remaining diamond. Ira scored that trick and got his ace of trumps later, but he never got to ruff a heart as he had hoped.

Two More O's Picked

Blue Chosen On AL Team

BOSTON (AP) — Vida Blue, the Oakland Athletics' brilliant young southpaw, heads a nine-man pitching staff named by Baltimore manager Earl Weaver today to the American League All-Star team.

Weaver picked two of his aces, Mike Cuellar and Jim Palmer, and one pitcher each from seven other clubs for the 42nd All-Star Game with the National League next Tuesday in Detroit.

Leading the American League for the second consecutive year as manager of the champion Orioles, Weaver again ignored relief specialists, naming nine regular starters.

His failure to pick a couple of top relievers was blamed by many observers last year for the American League's eighth loss in a row, 5-4 in 12 innings.

Closed with Blue, Cuellar and Palmer were Mickey Lolich of the Detroit Tigers, Sam

McDowell of the Cleveland Indians, Sonny Siebert of the Boston Red Sox, Jim Perry of the Minnesota Twins, Andy Messersmith of the California Angels and Marty Pattin of the Milwaukee Brewers.

McDowell, however, has been sidelined with arm difficulties, and there were indications that Cleveland Manager Alvin Dark would ask Weaver to replace him.

Blue, Cuellar, Lolich and McDowell are left-handers with a combined record of 50 victories and 17 losses this season in games through Tuesday.

Palmer, Siebert, Perry, Messersmith and Pattin are right-handers with a 48-32 record.

Earning All-Star honors in his first full season with Oakland, the 21-year-old Blue seems well on the way to the charmed 30-victory mark with a fabulous 17-3 record.

Cuellar, who pitched in the

All-Star Game for the National League while with Houston in 1967, was named to the AL squad for the second time. He has won 12 of 13 decisions for the Orioles this season.

McDowell was chosen for the sixth time despite an 8-7 record. Perry, a 24-game winner en route to the Cy Young Award in 1970, was picked for the third time. He has a 12-7 mark.

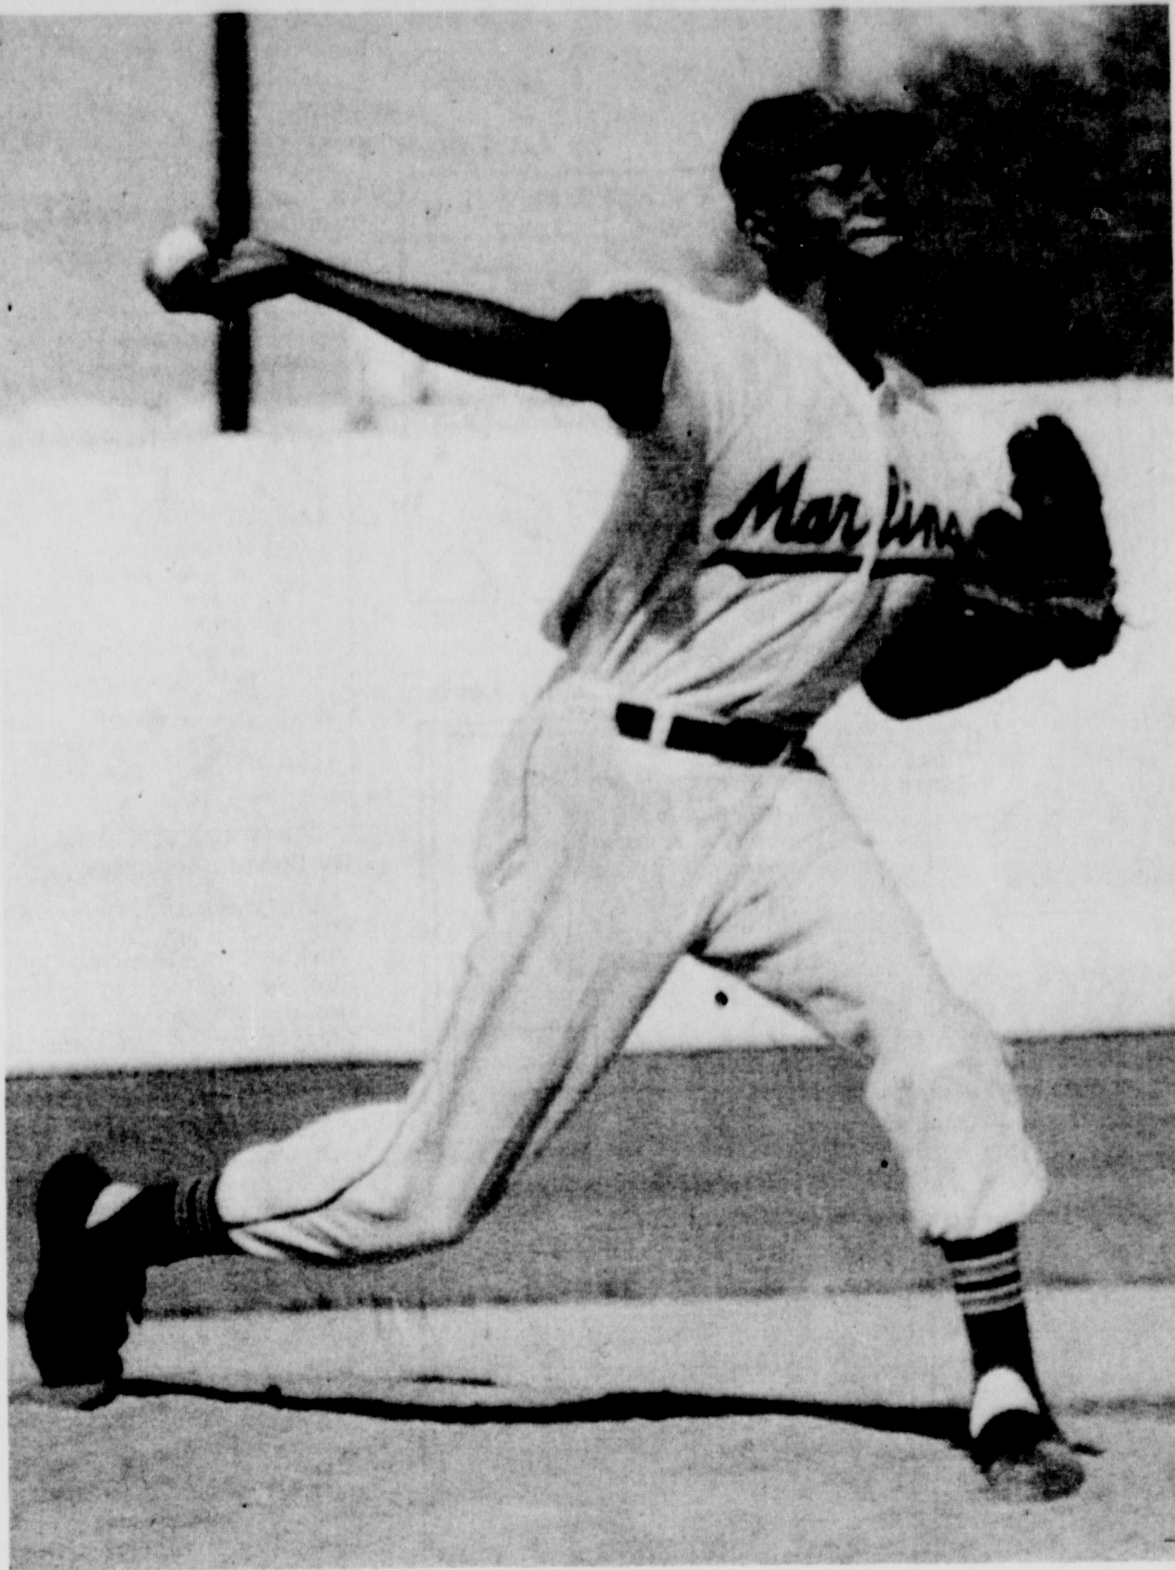

Lolich, 13-6; Palmer, 10-4; and Siebert, 12-4, were named for the second time. It will be the first appearance for both Messersmith, 7-8 and Pattin, 7-9.

With starters voted by fans, Baltimore is assured of four representatives in the midsummer classic.

Joining Cuellar and Palmer will be third baseman Brooks Robinson and outfielder Frank Robinson.

First baseman Boog Powell was voted to the team but had to withdraw because of a wrist injury Wednesday. Powell was replaced by Detroit's Norm Cash.

Eleven reserves will be named by Weaver to round out the 28-player squad. Each of the league's 12 teams must be represented by at least one player.

Satchel Paige . . . Now Fully Recognized

Front-Row Bust

Paige Is Granted Full Recognition

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Induction in the front row of baseball's Hall of Fame, appeared to be the ultimate honor destined to elude pitching-fantastic Leroy "Satchel" Paige—until Wednesday.

An announcement from Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn and Hall of Fame President Paul Kerr amended earlier plans to enshrine Paige's incomparable career in a separate section at the baseball memorial for greats of the Negro leagues.

At his home in Kansas City, Paige departed momentarily from his characteristic humility to say, "I guess they finally found out I was really worthy."

Plans for recognizing the feats of Paige and other greats of the Negro leagues with a special section in the Hall of Fame were announced last February. Bill Veeck, who brought Paige to the majors with the Cleveland Indians in 1948, expressed disappointment at the time because "I feel he should be entitled to a front-row bust."

Veeck said, "I'd like to know what other members of the Hall of Fame could come forward at the age of 50 and perform the way he did."

The reference was to Paige's first year with the Indians when the brilliant right-hander posted a 6-1 record to help Cleveland win the pennant.

Paige claims a birth date in 1906 but a story on him in 1940, resurrected from the files of the Chicago Daily News, put his age then at 38.

All sources considered, he was somewhere between 42 and 50 when he confused American League sluggers in 1948.

It hadn't been the first opportunity to do so. For years prior to '48 he'd worked against the best of both major leagues in the course of numerous barnstorming tours.

Dizzy Dean, the last major league hurler to post 30 victories in a season before Denny McLain did it in 1969, saw much of Paige in those old days. In a column he once wrote, Dean recalled his own "fast ball looks like a change of pace alongside that little pistol bullet old Satchel shoots up to the plate."

"That skinny old Satchel Paige with those long arms is my idea of the pitcher with the greatest stuff I ever saw."

After time with the Indians and the St. Louis Browns, Paige returned to the minors and tours.

In 1965, 17 years after his first major league appearance, he was signed by the Kansas City Athletics and went three innings against the power-laden Boston Red Sox.

He faced 10 batters, allowing only one hit — a double off the centerfield wall by Carl Yastrzemski. Paige was behind three balls and no strikes when the blast came and recalled, "I didn't know that was him when he first came up."

"I never would have gotten in a hole with him. Guys like that don't care about no 3-2 stuff."

Royals, Cards Suffer Losses

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

It was one of those nights for both the Kansas City Royals, who dropped an 8-2 decision to the Milwaukee Brewers, and the St. Louis Cardinals, who were defeated by San Diego 4-1.

Two hits made the difference at Milwaukee—a three-run homer by Dave May and a three-run triple by Phil Roof. May connected off left-hander Bill Butler in the fourth inning.

A 'Family Affair'

By VAUGHN HART
Sports Editor

It all started back in 1964, when a couple of brothers put their heads together and got their father to let them hold a small rodeo on the Dr. A. L. Lowe farm, west of Sedalia.

At that time there were no seats for spectators and the Lowe's own family stock was used in the rodeo.

But today the annual Show Me Rodeo with its permanent seating capacity of 3,400 persons and large arena, which measures 325 feet by 125 feet, the Lowes are hoping for their second "money-making" year in a row.

It took a long time and probably began to seem like a never-ending struggle for the Lowes, but 1970 finally paid off after six years of hosting the Show Me Rodeo.

Friday night at 8 p.m. will mark the opening of the Seventh Annual Show Me Rodeo at the Show Me Arena, three miles west of the Holiday Inn on 32nd Street.

The rodeo will run for three days with performances scheduled against 8 p.m. on Saturday and Sunday.

Dan and Bill Lowe, who at the ages of 17 and 16 respectively in 1964 had not outgrown their love of cowboys and horses, got their father to let them stage a little rodeo of their own for the Sedalia Rodeo Cowboys Association.

The two, along with Frank and Bill Hotzenpiller, Buck Banner, Curtis Pyle, Miles Evans and Harry Young, laid out a small area and had themselves a rodeo.

The following year, things really started buzzing as the Lowes held their first sanctioned rodeo by the International Rodeo Association.

However, heavy June rains held the crowds down to only 2,500 persons during the three-day event.

An effort was made the following year to rectify the situation by having the rodeo a month later during the day time.

But this didn't seem to help much either since the hot, dry days of July were not conducive to the rodeo's performances.

In 1967, the rodeo was held in mid-July, this time at night and that phase of the rodeo has not changed since.

But additions and renovations, done mostly during the off season by the Lowes themselves have changed another phase of the arena site.

Portable bleachers were used in 1965; they had only a seating capacity of around 1,200.

However, the arena is now ringed with 3,400 permanent bleacher-type seats. In addition, there are eight bucking chutes, two rearing chutes, as well as three saddling chutes. The 325 foot by 125 foot arena is the largest of its size in the state.

Last year's three-day event drew nearly 4,200 persons, which Dan Lowe noted recently was a landmark in the seven-year history of the event.

But the most significant factor of last year's event was that the rodeo showed a profit for the first time.

Lowe noted that this year for the first time a stock contractor is returning his stock to the rodeo. The stock again this year is from the Runnin' F Rodeo Stock Co. of Delaware, Okla.

Just as the Lowes' rodeo has noted a growth in recent years, so have rodeo numbers in the state of Missouri during the last six years. Today there are 17 more rodeo events held in the state each year than there were in 1966.

This year's rodeo is being sanctioned by the United Rodeo Association and will offer nearly $3,500 in prize money to the top finishers in each class.

Dr. A. L. Lowe, Dan's father, may have been instrumental in having developed his son's love for horses. Dr. Lowe currently operates 25 head of Arabian horses on his farm. Two of his horses have won noted prizes in recent years.

Ibn Zaraq was the Missouri State Champion Arabian Stallion in 1967 and 1968. Also in 1968, the horse won the All-Eastern Canada championship.

Ibn Zaraq's daughter, Zараene, won over all competition in the mare at halter class at the Missouri State Fair last year.

Resistance Is Met By Dan Devine

EDITOR'S NOTE: As National Football League clubs head for their training quarters many eyes have turned to the Los Angeles and Green Bay camps, where Tommy Prothro and Dan Devine begin the challenge of convincing the skeptics that coaches from the college ranks can be successful among their pro colleagues. Prothro and Devine sat down with Associated Press sports writers Mike Rathet and Will Grimsley for a round-table discussion that hinged on their rookie view of the established pro scene.

By MIKE RATHET and WILL GRIMSLEY
NEW YORK (AP) — One of the alternatives Dan Devine could have selected when he met resistance from some members of the Green Bay Packers the first time he attempted to instill his ideas was "to go in a corner and cry."

But he didn't, and neither will Prothro, the new coach of the Los Angeles Rams, for each pro rookie insists he will forge ahead with his own plans despite expected opposition.

Also discussed in this second of a three-part series are the Lombardi mystique and the case of Rams' receiver Lance Rentzel.

The questions and answers: Rathet: You both talked about developing players and working with them on fundamentals. Have you found resistance or resentment when you walk up to an eight-year veteran as a rookie coach and say "we're going to do this now" and he doesn't think there's a need for it?

Prothro: I'll be surprised if we don't find some resistance. I think the older a person the less eager he is to change. But I think that's a coach's job—to get it done.

Rathet: Dan, have you found any resistance to your ideas?

Devine: We had some players down at Texas at Arlington for 2½ days and I found some players left there who didn't buy me. There were several things I could do—I could go in a corner and cry or I could be mad about it or I could trade them. But I'm going to give them a chance to buy me. And I should say I didn't buy some of them either. But I think it's going to take a little patience on my part and I'm not going to trade a lot of people because they don't buy my philosophy.

Rathet: In your situation, would the Lombardi mystique be hanging over everyone's head in Green Bay?

Devine: No doubt that's part of it for anyone coaching at Green Bay. And it's right. I was aware of that before I took the job. I would like to feel that the Lombardi era could be a traditional part of our team. But there are so many things different now than then, too—and this is what the older players have to realize, that it's a 26-team league now not a 12-team league. It's a completely different situation now than when Vince came in.

Grimsley: As I interpret it, you mean that you'd like to use Lombardi as a lever the way Notre Dame used Rockne, to take part in its history?

Devine: Right. Exactly. I also should point out that Phil Bengtson (whom Devine succeeded at Green Bay) did one heck of a coaching job and I thought gave a lot to Green Bay football.

Rathet: Tom, you recently acquired a player who might be somewhat of a problem for you to handle in Lance Rentzel. Would you consider that he has in some way to get special treatment or in some way you have to "protect" him?

Prothro: I think the league has made that pretty clear and the courts—that he has to get some special treatment. I've never heard anybody say, I've never even heard it rumored, that Lance Rentzel was any problem to a coach on the field. He has a problem personally that reflects badly on him and his teammates and the sport. I think everybody hopes he can work it out and there is every reason to believe he can. We all know the problem's there.

Rathet: Isn't it difficult for a coach to have to give one player special consideration?

Prothro: I'm not going to give him special consideration.

Rathet: You did say he had a problem you had to deal with.

Prothro: Oh, the psychiatrist, not the coach.

Grimsley: Tommy, you're remaining in Los Angeles where you were successful as a college coach, but Dan you're really moving in to a new area among people who don't know you except by reputation. What's the difference?

Prothro: I think I'd rather get started with people and writers with whom I've established a pretty good rapport.

Devine: I've forgotten how much there is to starting all over again. I've forgotten how many new people are involved—it's been 13 years since I've made a move. I knew everybody. It's just like changing college jobs. You don't have all the alumni to meet but you got a guy downtown that does something for you, maybe runs the band, and you got another guy that helps with parking and another with the ushers.

Prothro: I was going to say, just along the line that Dan was talking about, there's an awful lot to football other than coaching the team. I'm still old-fashioned enough to believe that coaching the team is the most important thing.

Giants Catch Brunt Of Houston's Bats

Associated Press Sports Writer

Willie? No, he won't.
So Willie Mays was lifted for a pinch-hitter for the first time in his illustrious career with the San Francisco Giants.

Rookie Ed Goodson struck out for Mays—but it didn't matter because the back-peddaling Giants were enroute to an 18-4 humiliation by the Houston Astros Wednesday.

"You can't expect one man to carry you for 162 games," said

San Francisco Manager Charlie Fox after lifting Mays in the fifth inning with the Giants trailing 12-3.

Mays, the Giants' best clutch hitter since coming up in 1951, had never left a regular season game for a pinch-hitter, according to a team spokesman.

San Francisco's 40-year-old wonder player, the National League's starting centerfielder in next Tuesday's All-Star game, had a single in two at-bats before leaving the game. After a hot start this season, Mays has slipped to a .288 batting average and has just five hits and one run batted in during the last 13 games.

Despite the loss, the Giants gained ground on runnerup Los Angeles in the National League West as the Dodgers dropped a two-night doubleheader, 6-5 and 4-3 to the Chicago Cubs. San Francisco, which has lost nine of its last 12 games, now leads Los Angeles by four games.

The Montreal Expos rocked the New York Mets 12-7; the Pittsburgh Pirates clouted the Cincinnati Reds 9-3; the Atlanta Braves stopped the Philadelphia Phillies 4-2 and the San Diego Padres turned back the St. Louis Cardinals 4-1 in the National League's other games.

While Mays made news by sitting out, the Astros made hay against the San Francisco pitching staff with a 10-run, fourth-inning explosion and a six-run sixth.

Cesar Cedeño singled and smacked a two-run double in the fourth and slugged a two-run double in the sixth as the Astros poked 17 hits. The run production established a club record and every Houston starter except pitcher Larry Dierker had at least one hit, one run scored and one run batted in.

Jim Hickman drove in four runs with a three-run homer and single and Phil Regan provided ninth-inning relief help as Chicago beat Los Angeles in the first game. Hickman's bat helped build a 6-1 lead, but the Dodgers came back with a four-run ninth before Regan cut the rally short.

Billy Williams socked a two-run homer and reliever Oray Newman cut down a late Los Angeles uprising to give the Cubs their second-game victory. Williams' shot in the fifth inning gave the Cubs a 4-0 lead and their eventual winning margin. Veteran Juan Pizarro, pitching in his first major league game this year, walked two men with two out in the eighth before Newman came on to preserve the southpaw's victory.

Pitcher Carl Morton drove in two runs with a single and a home run as Montreal handed tailspinning New York its eleventh loss in eight games.

Derby Is Reset

HOLTS SUMMIT — The demolition derby, which was scheduled last Sunday night for Capital Speedway near here, but postponed because of rain, will be held this Sunday night.

In addition, the fireworks display that was postponed will also be held.

Over 100 cars are expected to compete in the demolition derby.

Curt Flood . . .

Wants Strong Court Action

WASHINGTON (AP) — Curt Flood, the controversial outfielder who sued baseball for $3.1 million, has asked the Supreme Court to invalidate the sport's reserve clause.

In a brief filed by his attorneys, Flood said organized baseball has violated the antitrust laws with its reserve system, which binds a player to one club for life unless he is traded or sold.

"It needs no argument to demonstrate that organized baseball is now interstate commerce," said Flood's lawyers in argument against baseball's exemption from antitrust laws. They said the Supreme Court had ruled against other professional sports in that area.

"No reason exists why baseball should be treated differently," they said.

Flood was represented by Arthur J. Goldberg, former Supreme Court Justice and Ambassador to the United Nations, and Jay H. Topkis of New York City.

The 33-year-old Flood, now believed to be living in Spain, played baseball for 12 years with the St. Louis Cardinals and was considered one of the best outfielders in the business.

His suit against baseball came in 1970 when he refused to report to the Philadelphia Phillies after he was traded by the Cardinals. He sat out one year, living in Copenhagen, Denmark, but was lured out of retirement by Washington Senators owner Bob Short with a contract calling for $115,000. But on April 27, Flood unexpectedly left the Senators.

Flood's suit against baseball was dismissed by District Judge Irving Ben Cooper. That decision was affirmed by a three-judge U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

He alleged in those courts, as before the Supreme Court, that nationwide baseball agreements among clubs restrict players to contract negotiations with the first club that employs or "reserves" them or with assignee clubs—in other words, clubs to which they may be traded.

Dobson Captures Sixth Win in Row

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
Associated Press Sports Writer

Pat Dobson's winning streak has reached six games and where it will stop nobody knows. In fact, Dobson thinks it may never end.

After stopping Washington 4-0 with a four-hitter Wednesday night, the 29-year-old right-hander of the Baltimore Orioles was asked how many he should win in the second half of the season.

"All of them, the way I'm pitching," was the reply.

If Dobson wins his next start on Sunday, he'll join the Big Three of the Orioles' pitching staff—Dave McNally, Mike Cuellar and Jim Palmer—as double-figure winners at the All-Star break.

Elsewhere in the American League, Boston blanked Cleveland 4-0 on Ray Culp's two-hitter but the Indians took the nightcap 4-3, the New York Yankees beat Detroit 5-3 in 11 innings, the Chicago White Sox nipped Oakland 2-1, Milwaukee trounced Kansas City 8-2 and California downed Minnesota 3-1.

The only trouble Dobson had with the Senators came in the seventh when he retired Tom McCraw and Del Unser with runners at second and third and one out. Frank Robinson had four hits for the Orioles, including his 12th home run.

The Red Sox fell three games behind Baltimore in the AL East when Cleveland pounded Luis Tiant for four runs in the first inning of the nightcap, including Chuck Hinton's three-run homer, and held on.

In the opener, Carl Yastrzemski slammed a three-run homer in the first inning and Culp held the Indians hitless until Graig Nettles singled in the sixth. Reggie Smith homered in the ninth for Boston.

Bobby Murcer's fourth hit, a two-run double with two out in the 11th inning, enabled the staff in victories this season.

Marichal, the veteran right-hander of the Giants, was named to the All-Star team a ninth time. He was left off the team last year, when he struggled to a 12-10 record.

Carlton, 10-19 last year, will be making his third trip to an All-Star Game. He's the only left-hander on the 1971 pitching staff.

The other National League pitchers will be Tom Seaver of New York, Larry Dierker of Houston, Ferguson Jenkins of Chicago, Dock Ellis of Pittsburgh, Rick Wise of Philadelphia and Clay Carroll of Cincinnati.

Greens Draw Criticism

SOUTHPORT, England (AP) — Jack Nicklaus headed into the second round of the British Open golf championship today smiling ruefully but still speaking with confidence about his chances of picking up the ancient crown for the third time.

"If you can take bogey sixes on the last two holes and still be only two shots behind the leaders, then it can't be all bad," said Nicklaus, who won the title last year in a playoff against Doug Sanders.

"Frankly I don't want to discuss the greens. We all know what they're like. It's the golf course we came to play, so let's play it."

The greens at Royal Birkdale drew criticism earlier this week for being too wet and soft. By midday, footprints of golfers who played the course in the early morning have dried, causing bumpy spots on the putting surface.

Nicklaus shot a 71 in Wednesday's first round over the 7,080-yard, par 35-38-73 layout and found himself two shots behind the man who beat him in the playoff for the U.S. Open at Merion in Ardmore, Pa.—Lee Trevino.

Nicklaus and Trevino were bracketed as 4-1 joint favorites for the title involving most of the top names in golf.

Trevino, Howie Johnson of Palm Desert, Calif., who is playing in his first British Open at the age of 46, Britain's Tony Jacklin, winner of the U.S. and British Opens two years ago, and Argentina's Vicente Fernandez shared the lead with four-under-par 69s.

Australia's Peter Thomson, bidding for his sixth victory in the British Open, shot a 70, as did former U.S. Open Champion Billy Casper and Kel Nagle, the veteran Aussie who won the title at St. Andrews in 1960.

Two men whose names don't often crop up in world golf also were at 70. They were John O'Leary of Ireland and Liang Huan Lu of Taiwan, who has won the Philippines and Thailand Opens.

Gary Player and Roberto de Vicenzo of Argentina were two shots off the pace with 71s. Charles Coody, the U.S. Masters champion, slipped to a 74 along with Dave Stockton, winner of the U.S. PGA title in 1970.

The field will be cut to the low 80 after today's second round. Then it will be reduced to the low 60 for the climactic round Saturday.

Step Up Crusade On Cancer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate has voted to step up the fight against cancer by creating a new agency reporting directly to the president, but House passage is questionable.

The proposed Conquest of Cancer Agency, spending as much as $1 billion a year by 1976, would take over the work and personnel of the 34-year-old Cancer Institute of the National Institutes of Health.

Rep. Paul G. Rogers, D-Fla., chairman of the health subcommittee which will conduct House hearings on the bill, says it might bring only a "cosmetic change" that could delay a cancer cure.

Although some senators voiced misgivings about the bill, Sen. Gaylord Nelson, D-Wis., was the only one voting against it Wednesday. The tally was 79 to 1.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., the bill's chief sponsor, said "cancer is the No. 1 health concern of the American People" and that a bold new program is needed to conquer it.

Sen. Jacob K. Javits, R-N.Y., another sponsor, added: "The country finds the rate of killing from this dread disease unacceptable because it believes a final drive will do the job."

"It feels we are so close to a breakthrough that a concentrated, unified program will achieve the final breakthrough."

The Senate measure is a compromise between versions proposed by Kennedy and President Nixon.

Although technically within NIH, the new agency would have independent status and report directly to the president.

The present Cancer Institute's budget of $332 million includes a $100-million increase proposed by Nixon and approved by Congress.

Kennedy foresees the new agency spending up to $1 billion a year by 1976, as recommended by a panel of experts from the Senate Welfare Committee.

Questioning whether there is solid evidence the Senate legislation could improve cancer research, Nelson said: "There just seems to be an emotional commitment that an independent agency will find the cure."

The Wisconsin senator said he fears the bill could lead to breakup of the NIH which he called the world's leading biomedical research center.

An aide to Rogers said the Florida congressman feels it probably is better to retain the Cancer Institute as an integral part of NIH, which has obtained more money and been given a higher priority to its work.

Studying Phaseout Proposal

CEDAR RAPIDS, Iowa (AP) — City officials are studying a proposal to call a special city-wide referendum on withdrawal of U.S. forces from Vietnam.

A group, called "Concerned Citizens for Peace," notified the city council Wednesday that it is circulating petitions for the special referendum.

In a letter dated July 2, Ronald Phillips of Cedar Rapids, co-ordinator of the group, said: "It is our wish that the citizens of Cedar Rapids will be able to do on the grass roots level what the Congress of the United States has failed to do, namely to express by democratic process responsible advice on a matter which concerns the loss of thousands of lives and millions of dollars."

The group asked for a referendum calling on the federal government to take steps to withdraw military forces from Indochina by Dec. 31. It also asks the government to engage in serious negotiation for the exchange of all prisoners of war.

City officials at a regular council meeting Wednesday expressed some doubt as to whether there were provisions in state law for a referendum on such issues.

The officials also questioned the cost of such a special election. City Clerk Harold Schaefer estimated the referendum would cost from $9,000 to $10,000.

He said there is a precedent for the city not paying the bill. He said in 1962 Cedar Rapids Jaycees paid for a referendum on daylight savings time. That referendum lost.

The council finally decided Wednesday to investigate the proposal to see what the legal basis for such a referendum would be.

Burglary Insurance Available

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Beginning Aug. 1, businessmen and homeowners in inner-city areas of Missouri and Illinois will be able to buy government-subsidized insurance against robbery and burglary, the Department of Housing and Urban Development announced Tuesday. A spokesman said the federal insurance will be sold through private agents. The maximum coverage is $15,000 for businesses and $5,000 for homes.

Rates will be computed on an area-wide basis. City and suburban policyholders will be charged the same rates.

The program also will be available in nine other states.

William Y. McCaskill, Missouri insurance superintendent, said he had opposed the plan but withdrew his opposition after discussing the matter with federal officials. He said earlier he felt the program was not needed in Missouri and administration would be expensive.

Hashish Smuggling Guilty Plea

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — Kit Ambrosia, 23, Wichita, pleaded guilty in U.S. District Court Tuesday to charges that she was part of a conspiracy to smuggle 140 pounds of hashish into the country from Afghanistan.

In connection with the same plot, Ernest Burke Scagnelli II, 23, Lawrence, Kan., entered a guilty plea on a charge of transportation and concealment of hashish without paying import taxes.

On March 15, Miss Ambrosia, Scagnelli and William G. Rolley Jr., Manitou Springs, Colo., pleaded not guilty before Judge Frank G. Theis on smuggling charges.

They originally were charged under tax laws which require a prison sentence of 5 to 20 years, with no parole or probation.

Rolley pleaded guilty April 3. Miss Ambrosia and Scagnelli pleaded guilty to similar charges under difference provisions which allow for parole and probation.

During the arraignment, Asst. U.S. Attorney Stephen K. Lester said the new charges were filed to allow the court more flexibility in sentencing.

Miss Ambrosia faces a maximum five-year prison term and a $10,000 fine. Rolley and Scagnelli face a possible 10-year sentence and $2,000 fines.

Judge Theis deferred sentencing until he gets a report by the probation department.

Research Suit Is Dismissed

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A $2.6 million damage suit filed by a man who claimed sex researchers William H. Masters and Virginia Johnson used his wife as a sexual partner for men treated at their clinic was dismissed Tuesday.

U.S. Dist. Judge Roy W. Harper held that the nine-count action filed by George E. Calvert was a "misjoinder" of separate counts. He said if it were refiled, it would have to be broken up into nine separate suits.

Calvert's petition named nine different "John Does" treated at a clinic operated by Dr. Masters and Mrs. Johnson in St. Louis.

Eight of the counts sought $225,000 in actual and punitive damages and one sought $500,000.

Calvert alleged he lost the conjugal society of his wife, suffered damage to his health, endured great mental anguish and "great humiliation and disgrace in... social and domestic relationships" because of his wife's involvement in the treatments.

Calvert also claimed the researchers profited through the employment of his wife through "great monetary gain by the publication of books on their research."

Dr. Masters and Mrs. Johnson, who operate the Reproductive Biology Research Foundation, wrote the best-selling books "Human Sexual Response" and "Human Sexual Inadequacy."

Masters and Mrs. Johnson, both divorced from former mates, were married in January.

IT'S ALL ARTIFICIAL VENTURA, Calif. (AP) — The new amusement park at California Magic Mountain contains over two million gallons of water in its artificial lakes and streams. An automated sprinkler system annually provides the equivalent of 52 inches of rainfall.
